

ABOUT ME

I am a Liberal Democrat Councillor in Haringey, London.

I have joined the Liberal Democrats after Brexit in 2016, and have been elected Councillor in 2018.

Over the years I have campaigned locally and nationally, from elections to local issues to pro-EU marches and protests. I have been part of the Exec of my local party and been part of two LibDems policy working groups: on Science, Innovation & Technology (2025) and Tackling the Climate Emergency (2019).

I work in the space industry, in spacecraft operations. I am also involved with several industry and multilateral initiatives, also at European level, to ensure sustainability of space activities and to mitigate the issues created by mega constellations (just google Kessler syndrome).

My past work experience also include being a desk officer for a governmental export agency and working in a multilateral development bank.

WHY ME

I am proud of the internationalist soul of the Liberal Democrats and passionate about working with other countries being the best way to address the problems we face and build a better society: no man is an island;

I strongly believe the role UK, and the Liberal Democrats, can play in championing pragmatism, respect of individual liberties and human rights, rule of law, and international cooperation;

I have worked in several international contexts working with others coming from different countries and backgrounds;

WHAT I WILL DO

I will work to strengthen Liberals in Europe everywhere, we need liberal values now more than ever;

I will work with our sister parties in Europe to build bridges and ease our way back in, supporting all the initiatives we discussed at Conference: from a EU-UK Custom agreement, to a UK -EU Climate Security Act, from bringing UK back into the EU regulatory framework for chemicals, aviation safety and medicines to safeguard our consumer rights to work for the introduction of a youth mobility scheme;

I will work to make the case in UK on why we are stronger in Europe and why a seat at the table will help us growth and reduce the increasing risks of a fragmented and unpredictable global scenario;
