

Antoine GODBERT is committed to defend European values

In the new post-globalization world, at a time when the strategic interests of the United Kingdom in Europe are threatened by the revival of imperialisms and by growing threats in terms of economic, commercial and military security, it is essential that Liberal Democrats can continue to affirm :

- multilateralism,
- rule of law
- human rights
- European unity

and to participate fully in cooperation with sister parties within or outside the European Union to defend liberal values threatened by external authoritarianism and internal populisms. I have done this for years with a lot of diplomacy and patience, notably as

- Director of an European cultural centre created around the tombs of two kings of England (Fontevraud Abbey)
- Member of the board of CEMR-CCRE, first European association of local and regional governments
- Member of the ALDE Lib-Dems delegation in the last ALDE conference
- Former vice president of European Movement France during 10 years

Antoine GODBERT works as a recognised expert of European affairs

In the new post-globalization world, it is essential to understand and to simplify the complexity of diplomatic relations. I have done so conscientiously, especially as

- Professor of Geopolitics and European affairs at a European university (ESCP Business School) in London, Paris, Berlin and Warsaw
- Director of international relations in the Cabinet of the Rector of Paris at the Sorbonne
- Former Director of French Erasmus + Agency, member of boards of many other European Erasmus + agencies (Serbia, Montenegro, Albania etc.)

Antoine GODBERT acts as a local activist combining local and European issues

In the new post-globalization and post-Brexit world, the consequences of European instability weigh on all public policies and, more than before, on the daily lives of our fellow citizens, wherever they come from. I have always been careful to share my political time in order to get involved with the closest communities as

- French citizen with Polish origin
- Graduated in geography and political sciences in Paris universities (Sorbonne Nouvelle, ENS and ENA)
- Former Councillor of City of Tours during 10 years, member of a sister party of Liberal Democrats
- Activist in local election campaigns for 3 years throughout the United Kingdom (ex: London, Guilford, Luton, Winchester...)

Proud to have been nominated by all friends inside and outside UK

As a man of goodwill, I am ready to bring new energy to the party's governance dedicated to European issues

Thank you for your vote

ANTOINE GODBERT

Liberal
Democrats

Liberal
Democrats