VOTE #1 for FCC

A fresh perspective on conference
Putting political outcomes first
Giving all members a voice

“Many members find a lot of the processes governing conference baffling – me too.

How does something get picked for discussion? Who decides who gets a speech? How do we ensure everyone has a voice?

What’s the purpose of all those constitutional amendments? As somebody firmly not in the ‘conference ultra’ category, I often find myself asking those questions.

If I’m on FCC, I’ll do my very best to ensure that what happens at conference is easier to decode for members. I’ll always make the case for spending more time debating the things that resonate with the outside world and less time debating internal processes.

Conference must have one purpose – bringing us all together to strengthen our toolkit for winning elections. If you agree that’s the right thing to do, vote for me.”
