

Antoine GODBERT is committed to defend European values

In the new post-globalization world, at a time when the strategic interests of the United Kingdom are threatened by the revival of imperialisms and by growing threats in terms of economic, commercial and military security, it is essential that Liberal Democrats can continue to defend :

- multilateralism,
- rule of law
- human rights
- European unity

and to affirm a balance of idealism and pragmatism to reinforce the importance of culture, sport and business in international exchanges in order to avoid a future of wars waged by aggressive egos. I have done this for years, notably as

- Director of an international cultural centre created around the tombs of two kings of England (Fontevraud Abbey)
- Member of the board of CEMR-CCRE, first European association of local governments
- Speaker invited to take part to panels and workshops during party conferences for LIBG or LDEG, member of the Lib-Dems delegations in the last LI and ALDE conferences
- Former vice president of European Movement France during 10 years

Antoine GODBERT works as a recognised expert of international relations

In the new post-globalization world, it is essential to understand and to simplify the complexity of diplomatic relations. I have done so conscientiously, especially as

- Professor of Geopolitics and European Affairs at a European university (ESCP Business School) in London, Paris, Berlin and Warsaw
- Director of international relations in the Cabinet of the Rector of Paris at the Sorbonne
- Former diplomatic advisor to the French Minister of National Education

Antoine GODBERT acts as a local activist combining local and global issues

In the new post-globalization world, the consequences of international instability weigh on all public policies and, more than before, on the daily lives of our fellow citizens, wherever they come from. I have always been careful to share my political time in order to get involved with the closest communities as

- French citizen with Polish origin
- Graduated in geography and political sciences in Paris universities (Sorbonne Nouvelle, ENS and ENA)
- Former Councillor of City of Tours during 10 years, member of a sister party of Liberal Democrats

- Activist in local election campaigns for 3 years throughout the United Kingdom ((ex: London, Guilford, Luton, Winchester...))

Proud to have been nominated by all friends inside and outside UK

As a man of goodwill, I am ready to bring new energy to the party's governance dedicated to international relations

Thank you for your vote ANTOINE GODBERT

Liberal
Democrats

Liberal
Democrats