

MARC HADLEY for FPC

Having worked closely with Marc over many years, I'm confident he has the values, energy and intellect to become an asset to the FPC

Andrew George MP

A voice for Cornwall and rural areas

Bridging the gap between doorstep and policy papers

Bringing lived experience to the FPC table

A voice for Cornwall and rural areas

A “hands on” local party Chair, activist and campaigner in West Cornwall. I am aware that the further local parties are from central decision-making, the less their situation and voter demographics are understood. They can be very different.

LibDem policies need to resonate across the whole country. I will bring a regional perspective to the table from one of the party’s former heartlands, essential to ensuring national policies are relevant to Cornwall and other remote, rural areas where we are rebuilding our presence at all levels and have been very successful in taking the fight to Reform.

Bridging the gap between the doorstep and policy papers

I am a member of the party’s “most prolific national canvassers” group and have spoken to hundreds of voters in recent years.

Some of the best policies are those that evolve from local campaigners listening to the aspirations and ideas voiced by voters on the doorstep. We need to draw on the most important resource we have - our body of local activists who knock on doors and deliver leaflets.

Bringing lived experience to the FPC table

I have a range lived experience that informs my policy perspectives. For example: of caring for elderly family members, being a member of a housing co-op, being a gigging musician, a music teacher and academic.

My particular areas of interest are: housing, disability rights, elderly people’s rights and children with SEND.

Working with Marc has been one of the greatest pleasures across my decades in the party because of his campaigning leadership, drive and determination. That's what he would bring to the FPC.

If we could replicate Marc Hadley, we would win all over the place!

Anthony Dunn